INTRODUCTION

Contracts are the basis of our liability in today's construction industry. The swift and economic resolution of all disputes within the construction industry and between the construction industry and building owners is a matter of obvious importance. Therefore it is important to be able to present or defend a claim completely and accurately. Depending on the nature of the claim, documents and records are needed to establish each claim. Construction claims should ideally be managed and resolved during the course of the construction. Meaningful resources should be used to ensure that a good document management policy and system are implemented. The trainer has extensive experience in construction claims, having been on all sides of a claim, as well as providing valuable information, insight and experience.
